Imperialism is a policy of extending a country's power and influence through colonization, use of military force, or other means.

Differences between Colonialism and Imperialism

Colonialism	Imperialism
Colonialism is when one country physically exerts its domination, either through a combination of war and diplomacy, over another country with a view to exploiting its resources	Imperialism is when one country is involved in creating an empire and expanding the borders in order to project its power.
In colonialism, there will be a movement of people to the new territory, becoming permanent settlers in the process	Imperialism is just about exerting control over the conquered regions either through direct governance or through indirect control mechanisms
Colonialism in the modern sense dates back to the 15th century when Europeans began to colonize large swathes of Asia and Africa	Imperialism is far older than colonialism dating back to ancient empires in history but is more commonly associated with the Roman Empire
Colony comes from the Latin word colonus which means 'to farm'	Imperialism comes from the Latin word ' imperium ' which means to 'command'
Examples of colonialism are to be found in the takeover of India, Australia, Southern, and Central Africa by the British and Western and North Africa by the French	The Scramble for Africa in the 19th Century and the Chinese domination of Vietnam from 111 BC to 983 AD are examples of Imperialism
